Ghana and Kenya headlines Mastering Claims and Dispute Resolution

Accra, Ghana/Nairobi, Kenya, 14th December 2015 - Neoedge, a leading events company based in Singapore, will hold “Mastering Claims under the FIDIC Contracts” training courses in two venues: Accra, Ghana and Nairobi, Kenya.

The Mastering Claims training course will be relevant a wide range of industries and one of its key factors is to instruct on how to properly respond to submitted claims. The training course will be an essential guide to successfully use the FIDIC contracts in mastering claims and resolve disputes. This programme is significant to both Contractor and Employer claims.

These training courses will be conducted on a 3-day workshop format and would consist of eight modules designed to provide detailed practical assistance in the presentation, analysis and resolution of claims under the FIDIC 1999 Contracts.

The workshop will cover topics such as identifying claims, cause and effect, entitlement, the Parties’ contractual responsibilities and obligations, the Engineer’s obligations, notices, supporting records, extensions of time, delay and disruption, concurrency, delay analysis methods, variations, quantifying the claim and contractual procedures.

The workshops in Nairobi and in Accra will both be led and facilitated by Mr Nigel Grout, an industry known construction professional specialising in the resolution and avoidance of disputes and contentious issues in civil engineering projects. A Quantity Surveyor practitioner for over 35 years and has particular expertise in FIDIC, ICE and NEC contract conditions.

According to Jhorden Niño-Jaja, Global Business Analyst at Neoedge, “This is a very timely training course that we’ll be conducting to cater to both Western and Eastern Africa, because of its recent huge success in South Africa and Tanzania.”

“What’s unique with this course is that, we have developed a format that’s going to make it a really interactive course between Nigel Grout and the delegates; thus, it is designed to include group discussion sessions, case studies and group exercises on practical issues all throughout the workshop.”, Niño-Jaja added.
